The Promise to Self

Rev. Brian J. Kiely

Promises are a core aspect of human life. Covenants are foundations in religion and in law, they are the basis for trust and the centre of our relationships. And if we are to have integrity in all things, we begin with the promises we make to ourselves.

September 10

The Promise to Others

Rev. Brian J. Kiely

These days many marrying couples like to develop their own wedding vows. They sometimes ask for help. "Simple", I say, "First, tell your fiancé what you like about them, say something about your hope for your shared life and most importantly say what you are truly willing to promise. Keeping those promises is the strength of marriage".

September 17

The Promise to Community

Rev. Brian J. Kiely

Communities, like this church, are also built on promises. Sometimes they are clearly stated, sometimes not so much. Sometimes the stated ones are ignored a little, while the quiet ones rule the community.

September 24

Chorealis will lead a musical exploration of the Theme of *Promises

Ministerial Musings

It's not often that I quote National Post columnist, Andrew Coyne...ok, it's never happened, but these might be extraordinary times. I'm writing on August 10th as Donald Trump is promising 'fire and fury' to North Korea and Kim Jong-un is promising 'enveloping fire' on Guam. I am not stockpiling post Armageddon supplies of canned food and water yet, but the news is still troubling.

This column is not about the odds of nuclear war. I will leave that to people who know about these things. This column is about the scary downside of anarchism and libertarianism. It's about the pitfalls of insisting on change for change's sake without considering the consequences or having a plan.

"Throw the bums out," is not a helpful political plan, whether we are discussing government, school boards, corporations, religious bodies or any community organization.

Burning down the house only leaves ashes and rubble and nothing on which to build a future. The institutions that we humans create to serve us are intricate bodies with history, policy and obligations that must be honoured. If it's time for change, well and good, but the idea of aggressive deconstruction of any institution is a very risky thing. The risk is heightened when power falls into the hands of those who have little understanding of, or respect for the institution they have come to control.

And so Andrew Coyne on the US - DPRK crisis states:

The lesson from all of this, painfully obvious as it should have been, is that it matters who is in the White House, not just who isn't. Those who had convinced themselves that, whatever Trump's manifest unfitness for office, "at least he isn't Hillary"; if they had not already repented of their folly over the previous six months, must surely do so now. (He said with no conviction whatsoever). The presidency is not a ceremonial post; neither is it a program of policy. It is a command centre, with decisions to be made, many on short notice, sometimes with the most profound consequences. (NP August 10, 2017).

I suspect that most reading this would agree that Trump was elected for the wrong reasons. He was the ultimate "Hell, No!" vote of angry people united by little more than their negative feelings about politics in general, democratic rule, hatred of Hillary, racist hatred of Obama, mistrust of government, dislike of refugees and immigrants...the list goes on...

In my view, his election was a triumph of anarchy and me-first libertarianism. Trump's most loyal supporters are anarchists, even though they would reject that term. Anarchy is "absence of government and absolute freedom of the individual, regarded as a political ideal". These are people who mistakenly perceive the state's role as taking their money and trampling on their rights. They might as well adopt the old revolutionary war slogan of, "Don't tread on me."

The other people who tilted the election were libertarians from the upper end of the economic spectrum, people who advocate unregulated capitalism and near absolute freedom to live however they wish. The two philosophies meet on the point of selfishness. They want what they want and hang everyone else.

The problem with both of these philosophies is that they define their positions in negative terms. They are against everything and only in favour of vaguely defined freedom. There is no agreement on what freedom should look like, no policy platform, no limits for the good of all...indeed no concept of the 'good of all'.

Donald Trump was their perfect candidate, all incendiary promises and no policy. Despite the grand puffery of the campaign trail, there was no plan for how to actually govern. Six months and zero legislation passed is proof of that assertion.

Institutions of any size are only successful when the people involved understand how the organization works, understand that even if change is desperately desired, sometimes compromise is necessary. Working relationships must be built on trust and not dictated from power. This does not happen overnight. It takes time, often more time than the people will grant in these times of 'instant gratification'. Sweeping change is not often successful change. When the ramifications of dramatic policy shifts are not fully considered, real people get hurt

So, here we all sit wondering if the Doomsday Clock is finally about to strike midnight. That decision rests, on one side in the hands of a narcissistic totalitarian madman. The other side of the decision belongs to a narcissistic, short sighted man incapable of truly understanding the legacy of the office he holds.

Diplomacy is an ancient art, not always successful, but a useful tool in the quest for peace and human rights. It is a strategy of change. Like most change strategies it takes time and patience, not bombast and threat. Diplomacy is frustrating and unsatisfying at times, but it sure as heck beats burning down the house.

(Brian Kiely)

Genocide Memorial Service
Interfaith Genocide Memorial Service, July 16, 2017, sponsored by The Edmonton Interfaith Centre and The Unitarian Church of Edmonton

There were 75 people in attendance on July 26, for the ninth annual Genocide Memorial Service, many with heartrending stories of genocide in their countries. Halal, from Syria, told the story of the escape of her family and how appreciative she is to be cared for and helped by Edmontonians. Ahmed, from the Somalia Association, with tears in his voice described the repeated rape of a woman who was in attendance, and the other atrocities that were and are still being inflicted on the people of Somalia; a Muslim prayer was offered for their dead. Sebastian Berrara, who works for the Boyle Street community spoke about the violent events in South America which devastated so many people and countries; Jasmina Colic and the Bosnia-Herzegovina Cultural Society, are making this memorial service an annual pilgrimage; they placed flowers at their memorial stone, while a young girl gave a traditional prayer for the men and boys massacred in Srebrenica. Susan Dutz from South Sudan, and Jalal Barsanji from Kurdistan read poems based on their Genocide experiences; Karen Farkas read Kaddish for all people who died; Karen Gall placed a memorial stone for her relatives who died in the Holocaust.

Readers included John Pater, UCE president Karen Mills, ministers Brian Kiely from the Unitarian Church of Edmonton, and Rev. Anne Barker from Westwood Unitarian Congregation. Gordon Ritchie played the harp throughout the service; Diane Scott from In Her Voices Women's Intentional Community played the Djembe during poetry readings and for the First Nations smudge, led by elder Pauline Paulson from the Edmonton Interfaith Centre: Sebastian Berrara sang a song in Spanish for those who survive despite terrible oppression; and the Raging Grannies sang the final piece to close the service. Kimberly Lang supervised the setting up of the facility, food and ushering, as she does every year, helping to facilitate the smooth operation of the memorial service. Thank you too, to all of the UCE folk who came despite the uncertain weather, who contributed to the refreshments and helped with the set-up and take-down of the chairs.

Next year, 20189, we will celebrate the 10th anniversary of the Genocide Memorial Service, with the theme of "Thanksgiving and Hope," An invitation is sent to all cultural and faith groups to join us with music, song, dance and the spoken word, to give thanks for those who survived terrible times, and to keep hope in our hearts that peace will come to all those places where genocide is still a reality.

Treasurer’s Report

Here is some guidance to those who have joined our church recently. Part of being a UCE member is supporting the church financially, to whatever extent you can. The important thing is that you make the effort and that we can identify your effort.

When you place cash in the collection plate, it’s anonymous. It’s great to have that money, but for members, it should be an “extra”. Please take the time to occasionally put money in an envelope (in the grey hymn books) and make sure your name is on it. Then our tellers know it comes from you.

Alternatively, you can give us a cheque, website – there’s a link at the bottom of an automatic contribution to the church annually or whatever. Most UCE or donate to UCE through the Canada Helps our website, www.uce.ca. Best of all is to set up from your bank account – it can be monthly, members make their contribution that way.

Take one of those steps and we can see that you’re doing your bit to keep UCE going. And of course, you’ll get a tax receipt.

Got questions? Give me a shout and I’ll get answers for you.

Our fiscal year ended on June 30 with a surplus. Donations from our members were about what was expected. What gave us the surplus were (a) several donations to the Endowment Fund, which now sits at $80,000;

($40,000 in revenue from our casual renters, which was $14,000 more than budgeted; and (c) $12,000 in fundraising money, $4,000 more than expected.

Faith in Action

Truth, Healing, and Reconciliation Facilitator Training

Are you interested in becoming a facilitator for the CUC Truth, Healing, and Reconciliation Reflection Guides? The next Facilitator Trainings will be held via Zoom video-conference on the following dates:

- Saturday, September 30 from 9 a.m. -12 p.m. Pacific, 12 - 3 p.m. Eastern
- Saturday, November 4 from 9 a.m. -12 p.m. Pacific, 12 - 3 p.m. Eastern

Please take special note about the facilitation training and its requirements. We approach this work knowing that we are all learning how to walk the path of reconciliation – in short, none of us are experts. We know that true reconciliation comes from the creation of safe space in order to engage in authentic dialogue. The materials used in the Reflection Guides are complex and the activities and group facilitation requires skill. This topic is sensitive in nature and facilitators need to be able to respond to sensitive group dynamics and responses to the material being provided.

For that purpose, we require facilitators to have a basic understanding of our approach to this work. Congregational approval and a $25 participation fee will be required to register for the training. Congregational support means that your minister or religious educator knows that you have signed up for the facilitation training and are in agreement that you'd make a good facilitator in this area. Follow this link to register <mailto:http://cuc.ca/event/thrrg-facilitator-training> (Submitted by Sylvia Krogh and Jeff Bisanz of The Social Justice Committee)

Famous Universalists: Beatrix Potter

Beatrix Potter is world renowned for her illustrated children's stories about Peter Rabbit. In fact, she wrote and illustrated 28 books which have sold over 100 million copies world-wide. She was born in Kensington (London), in 1866, to a prosperous family that was concerned with giving their daughter a 'proper lady's education', therefore, she was encouraged to draw and received her art certificate from the National Art Training School; she was, otherwise, self-educated. Her family had a strong Unitarian background and her grandfather, John Leech, donated land and supplies for the Stalybridge Unitarian Church in Cheshire. The character of Peter Rabbit was developed through her habit of sending illustrated letters to the children of her former governess. She had a deep love of the natural world and was an amateur natural scientist. She settled at 'Hill Top Farm' (a sheep farm) in Cumbria until her death in 1943.

Minister's Office Hours

Brian is usually in the office Tuesdays through Fridays from 10 until 2:30. Sometimes community meetings and visits cause him to be away. People dropping by are most welcome, but it's always best to call ahead and check to make sure he is there.

UCE Office Staff and Hours

I am pleased to announce that Janet Polkovsky is returning as administrator for the new church year, after her summer vacation, and will continue to give the meticulous attention and care she always dedicates to her administrative role here at UCE. I appreciate all the patience and kindness I received from the UCE Community while I worked at the office in July and August. It has been a learning experience for me, to get to know a little bit more about how this church is maintained; not only by staff, but by a collection of steadfast volunteers- e. slevin
